AS WE SEE IT—

The Emerging Germany

A REUNITED Germany seems more and more essential to the permanent peace of Europe. But it was not so long ago that the West had as much reason to fear German reunification as the Communists. There was no clear evidence of what kind of reunited Germany it would be.

The last year brought impressive evidence that Germany is on its way toward becoming a reliable part of the Western European civilization from which it sprang. There has been interesting minor evidence in recent days, in a movie theater in Heidelberg, at a luncheon in Chicago.

The East German rebellion showed plainly that the Russians have failed to win Germans. The West German election last September gave Konrad Adenauer such an overwhelming victory that it seems evident that the future Germany is going his way. And Adenauer's way is that of the West.

In Heidelberg last week a bitterly honest documentary film about the Hitlerian brutalities was finally shown.

The German audience watched it in remarkable silence and left quietly. There were neither cheers nor jeers. This, we venture to believe, was the reaction of people somberly aware of their mistakes.

This week Chicago had a distinguished visitor in Jakob Altmaier, member of the West German parliament. He was entertained at a luncheon by Heinrich Knappstein, German consul general.

Herr Altmaier happens to be an outspoken Social Democrat and as such a leader of the opposition to the Adenauer government which Herr Knappstein represents. But the mutual respect was obvious.

Herr Altmaier also happens to be a Jew who lost 39 relatives to Nazi brutality. He returned from exile to be elected and re-elected to parliament. The luncheon included some distinguished Jewish citizens. These included a rabbi who said grace.

As a long reflection of Bonn, the German consulate was practicing, and the German visitor reciprocating, in a dawning German political and religious democracy.

VISITOR INTERVIEWED

German Officials Held 'Pro-Semitic'

BY FRANK L. HAYES

West Germany today is free from "official anti-Semitism," said Jakob Altmaier, a Jew and former refugee from the Nazis, now a Social Democratic deputy in Parliament.

Altmaier told newspapermen at the German consulate:

"Officials from the chancellor down are pro-Semitic. Not the slightest anti-Jewish utterance is heard in Parliament.

take and fault of the German people is that they allowed the gangsters to become powerful enough to take over the country," said Altmaier.

"There exist in the population some incurable Nazis, to be sure. For 12 years under Hitler, Germans had been taught that every Jew is a criminal.

HE ADDED that in his opinion the United States can strengthen the German belief in justice and decency.

"I think the mass of people has been cured. I can speak for the soundness of the 30 per cent making up my own party.
Chancellor Adenauer, who is not
of our party, is no less sound."

He said that could be done
if the United States released
the German property confiscated during the war.

"While I am here I shall sound out members of Congress on that subject," said Altmaier.

BECAUSE Germans in general were shocked, said Altmaier, when they learned how 6 million Jews had perished in concentration camps, all parties supported an agreement to pay $750 million over a period of 12 years for rehabilitation of Jewish refugees in Israel.

Stevenson Greets Altmaier

Adlai E. Stevenson, 1952
Democratic candidate for president, suggested some New Year's resolutions today for his party.

His message was recorded to be sent to party organizations throughout the country.

While at the recording studios Stevenson had a brief talk with Jakob Altmaier, 64, noted Socialist member of the German Bundestag, or lower house. Altmaier is the first German high official of the Jewish religion
since 1933.

The meeting was held at the studios because of full schedules of the two men. Altmaier was to leave for Washington this afternoon. He will sail from New York for home on Jan. 23.

JEWISH BUNDESTAG MEMBER VISITS HERE

THE FIRST high German official of Jewish faith to visit Chicago in 25 years was Jakob Altmaier, a Social Democratic member of the West German Bundestag (parliament), who attended several functions here, last week, including a cocktail reception at the home of Brig. Gen. Julius Klein. Altmaier was one of the sponsors of the Israeli-German reparations agreement. Shown here with Altmaier (center) is Gen. Klein and Rabbi Louis Binstock of Temple Shalom, at the General's residence.

A Social Democrat, Altmaier believes "the

of Altmaier's relatives, including his 80-year-

German Leader Honored Here

History was made at yesterday's luncheon honoring Jakob Altmaier, 64, first high German official of Jewish faith since 1933.

His host was Dr. K. Heinrich Knappstein, German consul general, and the invocation was delivered by Rabbi Louis Binstock of Temple Sholem.

It was the first time in nearly a quarter of a century that a Jewish clergyman had officiated at a Chicago German consular function.

Dr. Knappstein told the gathering:

"I believe I learned about the real spirit of true Americanism at a dinner for Bishop Sheil at which Dr. Binstock also gave the invocation.

"I think this wonderful interfaith fellowship of faiths is mirrored in the new spirit of our new Germany, whose people, although they should not be saddled with a collective guilt for the horrors of the Nazi regime, nonetheless share a collective shame for those terrible deeds."

NOT 'REPARATION'

He praised Altmaier for his part in introducing a bill passed unanimously by both German houses—instituting the payment of $750,000,000 to Israel as a gesture of friendship. Altmaier is a Socialist member of the German Bundestag (lower house). Dr. Knappstein noted:

"This payment was not a 'reparation' in any sense.

"You cannot make reparation for 6,000,000 Jews killed between 1933 and 1945."

Altmaier revealed that 39 of his relatives had been killed by the Nazis, including his 80-year-old mother, who perished in a concentration camp. He said:

"In view of this, perhaps you wonder why I chose to return to Germany after the war.

"I can tell you it was largely because of the persuasion of the late Kurt Schumacher, leader of our Socialist party and a great man.

"Schumacher lost an arm fighting for Germany in World War I.

"During the Nazi regime, he was imprisoned for nearly 10 years in a concentration camp, where he lost an eye and a leg.

'DREAM CAME TRUE'

"It was he who asked me to return and help him in rebuilding a decent Germany. He died not long after the war, but I think he lived to see his dream come true."

Among guests at the luncheon were Gens. Julius Klein and Kenneth Buchanan, Meyer Kestnbaum, board chairman of Hart, Schaffner and Marx, and Merrill C. Meigs, vice president of the Hearst Corp.

MOST OF THE PROPERTY INVOLVED, HE SAID, IS OWNED BY LOWER OR MIDDLE CLASS INDIVIDUALS AND ITS RETURN WOULD HELP CEMENT FRIENDLY RELATIONS BETWEEN THE U.S. AND GERMANY.

ALTMAYER SAID HIS CONTACTS WITH U.S. OFFICIALS ARE BEING MADE UNOFFICIALLY.

Before leaving the United States, Mr. Altmaier emphasized again Germany's eagerness to cooperate closely with Israel. In a message to his personal friends he reiterated that Germany recognizes her obligation towards Jewry.

He expressed his gratitude for the warmhearted reception accorded him during his visit here by President Dwight D. Eisenhower, by the members of his administration, by Senators and Congressmen of both political parties, such as Senator Hubert Humphrey, Senator Herbert Lehman, Speaker of the House Joseph Martin, and Congressman Edgar Jonas. He recalled with pleasure his visit with former Governor Adlai E. Stevenson.

"In the United States," Mr. Altmaier said, "I have seen true democracy at work. The experience I have gained here leads me to believe that Germany too will receive just recognition of her claims.

"A square deal," he continued, "is the typical American way. When the issue of German properties confiscated during the war comes up for consideration, I am confident that it will be treated fairly and justly.

"The return of these properties to their rightful owners will heal a wound which the unfortunate, horrible war has inflicted on the little people.

"This is a problem," Mr. Altmaier said, "which concerns the little man, and it is he who will be affected by the benevolence of this great country of yours."
